A Little French Story.

In some parts of France marriageable girls are accustomed to pluck, as they return from midnight mass on Christmas Eve, a sprig of apple tree, which they put in a vial full of water; the vial is hung in their bed-chamber in front of the window; if one bud blooms before Easter the mistress is sure to be married before the year ends. Among the servants of a chateau near Alencon was a chambermaid from Brittany. She was gentle, good-natured, quiet, pious,—an excellent girl every way—but she was hunchbacked. Her name was Ursule. Taking advantage of the dark night she, too, plucked a sprig of apple tree, sure that no body saw her. She was mistaken. A fellow servant saw her and made the servant's hall ring with peals of laughter at poor Ursule's expense. Still they kept the secret among themselves. They all agreed to play a trick on poor Ursule. On Easter Eve one of the journeymen gardeners removed the old sprig of apple tree from the vial in Ursule's chamber and put in its place a sprig covered with blossoms. When Ursule went into her room she could not believe her eyes. She returned to the servants' hall; her face was radiant with delight as she showed her trophy, the laughter, jeers, and hootings of her companions revealed the trick put on her. She stood dumb, confounded, trembling, scarcely able to restrain her tears. Just at this moment the mistress entered the room and said,—

"Ursule, the apple-tree sprig may be trusted; believe it; you will be married before Christmas next. You are a virtuous girl; I am sure you will make a virtuous wife. All that you want to get a husband the money wanted I will give you."

As she spoke, the mistress twined a thousand franc bank note around the sprig and returned it to Ursule. A fortnight afterwards the journeyman gardener who had put the trick on her asked her in marriage, but she refused him, at which he was greatly jeered, and married another.

"What is this man charged with?" asked the judge. "With whiskey, yer honor," replied the sententious policeman.

That kind of religion is likely to be most popular which does not seriously interfere with what you intend to do.
